NEW PAVILION OPENED

Book of Micah Discussed by Dr. White in New Structure on McDonald Island.

Over on the island is the new Bible School pavilion with its cool cement floor and its open sides through which the breezes of the lake blow, and the student chairs and the atmosphere of retired quietness makes the new quarters inviting.

It was here that Dr. White held his 11 o'clock Bible hour yesterday, taking the book of the minor prophet Micah for the morning lesson, showing the striking features of the text.

Dr. White said that he wished the lesson to be known as a study, and not a lecture.

There are ten Micahs mentioned in the Old Testament, he said, and this prophet is distinguished from the others by the name Morasthite. One knows that Micah wrote before 722, which was the time of the destruction of Samaria. He probably lived between 700 and 740, as he prophesied the destruction of Samaria. Micah was a late contemporary of Isaiah and probably did not prophesy for as long a period as did Isaiah.

The book of Micah tells of the destruction of Jerusalem and the glory that will follow the destruction. The book is interesting because of its style, many questions being asked by the prophet and answered by himself. The manner of teaching and talking followed by Micah is most effective and today is used by many of the best known pulpit orators. Dr. White cited as an example of this successful method of public speaking Dr. Parker, of London.

Throughout the study of the prophets one finds them speaking regretfully of the punishment that is to come and in Micah 1:8, 9, one finds the prophet saying in regard to the pending destruction, "Therefore, I will wall and howl," and asking that they do not declare this destruction at Gath, for the people of Gath were Philistines and would rejoice at the destruction coming on the children of Israel.

Dr. White called the attention of his class to a remarkable play on words that one finds in Micah and, in fact, in all the prophets. In Micah 2:2, 3, special attention was called to the play on the word devise.

In the Old Testament one finds monopoly rapped again and again, and to settle some of these great questions of social science in Dr. White's opinion, students must turn more and more to a study of the Old Testament. Especially is this true in the old Hebrew method of distribution of land. If one reads the Scriptures aright it teaches that God will cause the loss of all land illegally acquired.

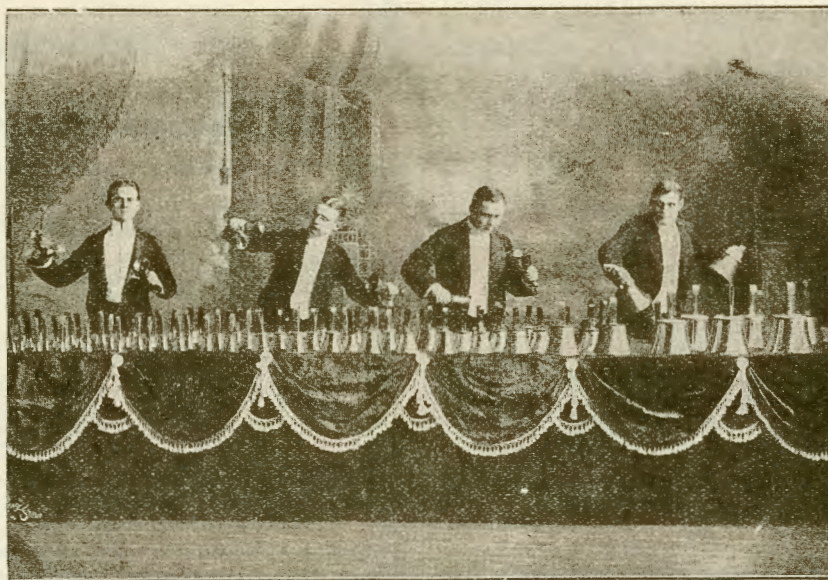

In Micah 2:6, one finds where the true prophets are forbidden to speak. Here Micah cries out against the unjust use of riches and the people who right and wrong and, as men do today, too often decided wrong was right.

Dr. White suggested that all studies in psychology be rewritten in the light of the Bible. Too often these prophets of old, as well as those of modern times, decide in favor of the rich and powerful, and often, when no pay is given, no advice is given.

Micah prophesied that no vision would come to these false prophets and that they would go down. All the false prophets were weak on the sin question, and did not bring home to people their sins.

Dr. White dwelt on the thought of the risk and responsibility of being a servant of God's, not to say anything of the responsibility of being a prophet or teacher of God's message.

THE DUNBARS BELL RINGERS AND SINGERS.

wish the prophet to say just what is acceptable to them. Even in these early days men did not wish a minister or prophet who disturbed and criticised them.

The prevailing theme of the third chapter of Micah is false prophets. This chapter is also interesting because it contains a cannibal scene in figure. In this striking way does Micah put truth to the leaders of the people, and he denounces strongly the princes and false prophets. In olden times the prophets were in the habit of accepting fees and the larger the fee the more satisfactory the message from the prophet. By justifying the things they use to condemn, men became false prophets. They lost sight of the essential difference between

The first part of the book of Micah is a story of destruction, but in the latter part the bright days come.

Commencing with chapter four tomorrow, Dr. White will finish the study of the book of Micah.

Play Ground for Children.

The new play ground for children has been opened at Science hall and all mothers who desire to have their afternoons free from the care of their little ones, may leave their children at the play ground, where they will be entertained and cared for by several kindergarten teachers. This will give tired mothers an opportunity to attend lectures, entertainments and seek other diversions. The fee is fifty cents a week.

THE TOAD AND HIS COUSIN

Prof. Schmucker Began His Convocation Lectures—His Story of the Toad and Its Habits.

A treat is in store for all who attend the convocation lectures this week, for in Prof. S. C. Schmucker, of the Pennsylvania State Normal, who is to speak each afternoon, one finds that rare combination of the nature lover and the entertaining speaker.

Prof. Schmucker spoke yesterday on "The Toad and His Cousin."

"Don't pick up that thing," is the general cry given by grown people to children who would pick up and study a toad—why they do this no one knows, the speaker said.

The stories which Joel Chandler Harris gives were brought from Africa long ago; the Grim Fairy stories came from Germany and are the old folk stories, but Prof. Schmucker has never heard from where we, as a people, received our loathing for a toad.

"If one handles a toad, one will get warts," is an old belief which is the most nonsensical belief possible. Prof. Schmucker tried to explain this belief on the part of the majority of people by saying that because the toad was "warty" all over, one thought by touching it one would get "warty," too. A toad is warty for the same reason that a frog is green, and that reason is self-protection.

Prof. Schmucker gave an interesting account of trying to hunt frogs that were hid on the green stems of plants, which were covered with green slime from the water. The frog breathes through his nose; he does this by pulling down his chin. He sings through his nose, as does the toad. The spring song of the toad is, in Prof. Schmucker's opinion, beautiful. Thoreau, the great naturalist, put the toad's song above all other spring songs in sweetness.

A toad is known as a hop toad, because one only sees it when it hops. He lives on the warty ground and is almost invisible when he keeps still. The toad has the power to produce a secretion that is so unpleasant that it keeps him from being eaten—a very bitter secretion which is produced in greater quantities during the time of reproduction.

A race between a June bug and a toad is interesting and exciting, in Prof. Schmucker's opinion. The end of the race is always a victory to the toad for the June bug has no sense at all. If it had, it would keep still, for a toad will not catch a bug that is not moving.

The toad at last sticks out its tongue and the June bug is gone. One large, healthy toad will eat eight or more June bugs in an evening.

Prof. Schmucker advises all farmers and gardeners to gather up all the toads they can find and turn them loose on their fields. They are the best friends the gardener can have, for they eat slugs and snails and act as general scavengers. The toad will easily respond to a call, and is very fond of having its back scratched, so it is easy to have a pet toad.

Prof. Schmucker spoke at the auditorium last night on "The Flower's Best Friend," illustrating the lecture with lantern pictures. This afternoon he will speak at 4 o'clock. All of his lectures are open to the public and all nature lovers will find them of high worth.

ABY DIDDEL IS CHAMPION.

Began His Career as Golf Player on Winona Links—Won Twice.

For the second time in two years, Will Diddel, of the Highland Club, of Indianapolis, won the state golf championship, defeating H. E. Zimmer, also of the Highland, in thirty-six holes of match play, in the finals Saturday. His score against Zimmer, who had defeated some of the best golfers at the tournament, was 4 up and 3 to play. The play all through was close and interesting. Zimmer was 1 up at the end of eighteen holes' play in the forenoon, but the handicap did not in the least affect the champion's play. He is regarded without a doubt as the best amateur golfer in the state.

"Aby" Diddel is a genuine Winona product. He began his golf as a cadet six years ago on the Winona links and has improved steadily on his game each year. It is peculiar that both the winner and runner-up, Zimmer, are Wabash College boys, the former a sophomore the latter a freshman.

The Dunbars' Concerts.

The Dunbars, bell ringers, singers and soloists, will be on the Winona Assembly program this afternoon and tonight, and there is promise of two pleasing programs from them. C. C. Curry, Ralph and Harry C. Dunbar and Ralph H. Parland are all accomplished singers and Ralph Dunbar is a gifted cellist.

Airship at Winona Lake.

Bodkin's airship has been engaged to come to Winona Lake the week of August 6. This ship has been making some sensational flights this summer.

SCHOOL OF TEMPERANCE.

Anti-Saloon League of Indiana Holds Its First Sessions.

The national committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America will meet at Winona the last of this week. This is a called meeting of the committee and there will be present Dr. Howard Russell, founder of the anti-saloon movement; Bishop Luther Wilson, S. Edgar Nicholson, Wayne B. Wheeler, Dr. I. N. McCash, Wm. H. Anderson and U. G. Humphrey, who is state superintendent of temperance work in Indiana. This committee will meet with its national superintendent, P. A. Baker, and with Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, the national legislative superintendent.

This morning at 9 o'clock in the Daguerre building will be held the opening session of the training school. The morning theme will be "Agitation—Needs and Methods" and will be presented by U. G. Humphrey.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon is a lecture of special importance by Rev. J. F. Lewis, attorney for the Anti-Saloon League in Indiana, on "Our Laws—Their strength." Tonight will be a lecture on "How to Use the Stereopticon in Temperance Work," by U. G. Humphrey, who will use the stereopticon to illustrate his lecture.

All the sessions of the training school will be held at the Daguerre building. This training school is something new in the history of temperance, and it is the object of the school to train temperance workers, just as the mission school trains missionary workers.

Library School Year.

During the April fire at the Winona Technical Institute at Indianapolis, the Library School and its equipment were destroyed. The school was able to finish its course in more commodious quarters in the Graphic Arts building, and is fast making good its losses, so that it will be fully equipped for its opening on October 10.

Owing to the irreparable loss of the record of forty or more applications for next year's course in library training, entrance examinations will be held at Winona Lake, August 14, and at Indianapolis, September 12. The examination includes general history, general literature and general information.

Any one desiring to learn more of the Library School course at Indianapolis, may address the director, Miss Merica Hoagland, at Winona Lake before August 17, after that date at Indianapolis.

Hand Wrought Metal Work.

The public is invited to visit the Art School in College Hall, where, in connection with the exhibits are a number of useful and decorative articles in brass and copper. The method of teaching this work is so simple that even a child can make a number of pieces in a very few lessons.

SHOW BY THE ELEPHANTS

Eph Thompson's Herd Give Some Highly Amusing Feats in Tent in Winona Park.

Eph Thompson's elephants gave their first performances at Winona Park yesterday, and the big, muscular trainer showed that he has spent months of effort and patience in drilling into the animal minds how to perform their feats. Nearly every herd of elephants one sees with a circus has one comparatively small elephant which is the clown, and which has as a mission to hold a crowd in good humor. Eph Thompson has four such elephants; in fact, all the animals he has are performers of this kind.

Many grown people found occasion yesterday to take their children to the show in the big tent near Duke's fountain. In many instances it was necessary for both father and mother to take their child, while in many other instances it kept a mother or a father busy looking after three or four little folks.

There were no furbelows or preliminaries to the show. The moment the elephants waddled into the ring they went to work. One of them held a long cotton rope in his mouth, while another turned at the other end, and Thompson jumped the skipping rope. A third elephant stood on one side of the ring and with his trunk tossed a dumb-bell across to the trainer, who tossed it back again, the elephant catching the bell with the skill of a Winona baseball player. Two of the elephants thumped a huge ball, as large as a rain-barrel, back and forth across the ring.

The Dunbar bell ringers who are at the Winona auditorium this week must look to their laurels, for Eph Thompson has some performers in the same line. There are three of the elephant bell-ringers and they use strands of sleigh bells, ringing them with their trunks. One of them unfolds the music so that any music critic in the audience may follow the elephant performers, and they extract a genuine tune from the bells. One of the performers has been taught to strike a match, throw it on the ground and put out the blaze with its foot. When the big telephone bell rings, one of the herd answers to see what is wanted.

The largest elephant of the four opens a barber shop in the sawdust ring, and for a few minutes there is "something doing." An elephant customer sits on a box, a big white apron is tossed over his head by the elephant porter in the shop, and then the biggest animal gets busy. He goes after the customer with a gallon or so of lather and a brush, and after a few swipes the customer looks like a white-washed fence. The big elephant straps a wicked looking razor, while the victim gives no sign of fear. After it was all over, the shorn elephant was sprayed with cologne and dashed with powder, the customer hunted up a dollar and paid his bill as the shop porter dusted him with a whisk broom.

There was a boxing match, in which one elephant knocked out another in the second round. Another feat was the turning of a summersault by elephant "Mary," when she turned completely over and landed on her feet. Another of the beasts played soldier, with drum, rifle and sword.

In many ways it was a highly amusing performance, and the crowds of yesterday enjoyed it hugely. The elephants are at Winona Park for two weeks.

MR. PLUMSTEAD'S PROGRAM.

Monologist Pleased a Large Audience at the Auditorium.

A large audience greeted the Rogers' Orchestra and Ellsworth Plumstead at the recital of yesterday afternoon. The orchestra gave two numbers, "Romantic Overture" and "The Palms."

"Thoughts for the Discouraged Farmer," by Riley, was the first number given by Mr. Plumstead. With spectacles, and air and mannerisms of the Hoosier tiller of the soil, Mr. Plumstead made Riley's farmer seem very real to the audience.

"One of the Palls," by a Dakota author, was given. This, too, was a picture of country life and folk. A humorous selection, which appealed especially to the children, was "His Besetting Sin." The boy hero "who, when he got big was never going to wash his neck, was well portrayed by Mr. Plumstead, "The Last Shot," an incident of an English engagement was next given.

Rogers' Orchestra played the tuneful, ever popular "Narcissus," after which Mr. Plumstead appeared dressed in the costume of a poor writer who was obliged to eke out a scanty existence in the sixth story of a tenement. It was in this monologue that Mr. Plumstead showed much ability as a reader and impersonator. The presentation of the monologue is a comparatively new thing, and it presents a wide field for the display of the reader's personality.

In the reading of a pile of letters, mostly "duns," Mr. Plumstead convulsed his audience. A letter from the mother almost persuaded the boy to return to his home; one from the father changed his plans; one from his sweetheart made him feel life was a failure, but a check, his first one, for fifty dollars, restored all the pride of the author.

All these delicate shadings of character were vividly portrayed by Mr. Plumstead, who will be heard at Winona four times more this week.

Dr. J. G. Nehrhas is the Winona physician and may be consulted at his office at Winona Hotel, or called by telephone.

Winona Plays at Milford.

The Winona boys go to Milford today leaving Warsaw at 1:20 p. m. Each team has won a game and a close contest is expected. Go along and support the home team. Winona fans will see a good game at Warsaw today, when Goshen plays at River-view park. Goshen won last week, but Warsaw will be much stronger and should get the long end of the score.

Wednesday, at 3 p. m., the strong Monroeville team will cross bats with Winona. This team won here a year ago and hopes to turn the trick again, but will have to go some to do it. Enyert, of Warsaw, will pitch for the "Little Red Men." Game called at 3 p. m.; admission 15c. Rain checks for game of Saturday good for this game.

Chautauqua Students Meeting.

All graduates and readers of the Chautauqua course and every one interested in the Chautauqua movement and in the observance of the Chautauqua recognition day are requested to meet in front of the auditorium on Thursday afternoon, immediately after the close of the convocation lecture.

MANAGER AS MOTORMAN.

Harry Dickey Shows "the Boys" That He Knows How to Run Car As Well As Railway Business.

Manager Harry S. Dickey, of the Winona Interurban Railway Company, acted as motorman on one of the Winona-Warsaw cars from 6 until 11 o'clock on Monday morning and clearly demonstrated that he understood the business. One of the regular motormen, who was out of the city, failed to return on time and Manager Dickey operated the controller until his return.

The Flowering Spurge.

This is the season for white-blossomed weeds in the waste places, and frequently, to the discomfort of the farmer, in the cultivated fields. Any of these are not interesting, but there is one whose parts are arranged with such mathematical nicety that it is a wonder someone has not named it "geometry weed." It grows from two to three feet high, and the smooth stem is covered with alternate, simple, oblong leaves. At the top of the stem is a whorl, usually of five leaves, and from this the stem branches most commonly into five parts, but sometimes six, and occasionally less, with one little flower stem growing straight up in the center. The center stem bears a single flower, and the others subdivide commonly into three smaller stems, and these again into three flower stems, so that there will generally be over fifty flowers from the top of the stem, while later similar stems spring from the axils of the upper leaves.

Whatever the number of divisions, the space is equally divided between them, making angles of 60, 72, 90 or 120 degrees. The flowers are white, about a quarter of an inch in breadth—that is to say what appear to be flowers, for botanists say that these white parts are only unusual envelopes surrounding the real flowers. Therefore the name of the plant—the Flowering Spurge—is of the order known as lucus a non lucendo, or the principle on which a colored man is sometimes called "snowball."

The flower is very curious in construction, but cannot be satisfactorily examined without a magnifying glass. It belongs in the same family as the beautiful Poinsettias of the gardens, the Tallow-tree of China, and the Caster-oil plant.

In Honor of Mr. and Mrs. Flowers.

FIELD WORKERS TO MEET

What Sunday School Missionaries Are Doing in Back Districts of Indiana.

The Indiana field workers of the American Sunday School Union, and perhaps a number from other states, will come to Winona Lake in August for the first conference the Indiana workers have ever held. It will bring together nine men from this state, of whom the people of cities and towns seldom see and as seldom hear, but they are men who in the sparsely settled regions of the Hoosier land are better known than the carriers on the rural mail routes. It is the business of these field workers to go among a class of people who would not otherwise hear of the Bible. The chief purpose of the Sunday School Union is to get copies of the Bible in these homes, and with this purpose is closely linked that of organizing Sunday Schools at points convenient for the poor of the rural districts.

The American Sunday School Union, with headquarters in Philadelphia, was organized in 1824 and it has spent $10,000,000 for Bibles and other religious literature, all of which has been distributed free in the remote regions of American civilization. It pays no salaries to its field workers, who live as best they can from free will offerings of the people among whom they work, and their lot is harder than that of the old-time circuit rider, who rode their horses from settlement to settlement when Indiana was young.

The field men seek the cross-roads points and there open the Sunday Schools, using blacksmith shops, graneries, or any kind of building that will offer shelter from the weather, and in these Sunday Schools are gathered the men, women and children of a neighborhood, regardless of religious beliefs.

Of the men at work in Indiana, J. M. Caress, of New Albany, goes through the hill country of southern Indiana. J. A. Carter has Brown county in his district, and he has organized a number of Sunday Schools for the neglected poor in the hills of that and Morgan county.

W. H. Hess, who is organizing the August conference, makes his home at Winona Lake throughout the year, and the ten northern Indiana counties over which he travels is one of the largest districts that the Sunday School Union has in the Middle West. The methods followed by Mr. Hess are typical of that of all the missionaries. He has a wagon similar to that of a rural mail carrier, only it is not brilliant with red paint, and it is covered with religious inscriptions. Mr. Hess went into this Sunday School work six years ago, with his pockets empty, but loaded with the hope that seems to fill every kind of mission worker.

A variety of literature is stacked up in shelves in the Hess "Gospel wagon," but the chief stock is Bibles. The Bibles are substantially bound in cloth, printed in minion type, and the covers are of dark red, that the book may be made more attractive to children. In six years Mr. Hess has found 500 families in the ten counties of his district who had no Bibles. He has found boys fifteen years old who had never been inside of a Sunday School.

"It is surprising to see," he said, "what destitution there is in the way of knowledge of the Bible in this old settled region of the state. But there has been mission work done among the poor and ignorant in this part of Indiana, for in Wabash county I have found tracts which were distributed to the humblest homes fifty years ago."

One of the difficulties with which he has to contend is in making the Sunday Schools permanent. One of the schools may run through a winter, and when spring opens the organization will lapse. It is this which keeps him almost constantly on the road, and it is not uncommon for him to begin a journey at 5 a. m. and stay on the road throughout the day, looking after several schools on the way. He goes into regions which bear such significant names as "the Long Swamp" district. He has started a Sunday School in an abandoned country church which during its palmy days sent out eight ministers of the Gospel. Five years ago he opened a school in one neighborhood and a girl fourteen years old immediately became its mainstay. Her interest in it has never lagged and she is now the efficient superintendent of the school.

In one little town of his territory, Mr. Hess found a church that had been abandoned. He obtained permission to use the structure, spent two days in driving to the homes of forty-one families, and on the next Sabbath opened a school. For years the little town was given over to Sabbath desecration and recklessness, but its moral tone has since changed.

When the missionary first entered this town, the word spread among the people that he was a state fish warden, and there was a hurrying and scurrying among the natives to conceal their unlawful fishing equipment. One woman buried her husband's fish nets in the ground. Before the missionary went to this lowly community, the few Christian people who lived there had become disheartened and abandoned their religious efforts. Mr. Hess, a few months ago, held a series of meetings in this place and converted forty-nine. A pastor has been obtained to preach every two weeks, the stores close on the Sabbath and for the mid-week prayer meeting, and a general reformation has taken place.

A few years ago Mr. Hess opened a Sunday School in a blacksmith shop in Kinzey, a cross-roads point in Kosciusko county, within five miles of Winona Lake. It has been one of the most active schools which he has started. The people who attend it are poor, but they have given as liberally to it as they could.

The conference of the missionaries will be held at Winona Lake during the Bible Conference, when some of the best religious orators who speak the English tongue will be here. Mr. Hess will take a number of the most eminent ministers to Kinzey to dedicate the new chapel, which is to take the place of the blacksmith shop as a meeting place. The chapel has no stained memorial windows, no pipe organ, no choir loft, no mahogany pulpit, but it is a church of which Mr. Hess is exceedingly proud.

C. W. Hippard, of New York City, is a guest at the Winona hotel.
