NEWSBOYS' BAND AT LAKE

Fifty-Two Youngsters Traveled All Day and Gave Splendid Concert at Night.

The Indianapolis News' Newsboys' Band, with fifty-two dusty and tired young musicians in the ranks, came to Winona Lake last evening. They came by way of Fort Wayne, over the Lake Erie & Western and Pennsylvania railroads, and were most of the day on the road. They were met near the gates of Winona Park by the steamer City of Warsaw, and their first view of the Park on the shore was from the decks of the steamer as it took them to Kosciusko Lodge, where they are to make their home for the week. The band is to give an afternoon and an evening concert at the auditorium, and the rest of the time is to be put in to the liking of the youngsters. Their money will not be worth three cents on the dollar while they are here. Their uniforms open every door in Winona park to them.

At Kosciusko Lodge, an immense room, with great windows opening in all directions has been fitted up as a dormitory for them, their comfortable cots being spotless in their whiteness.

As the long train rolled up to the Pennsylvania station, a shout went up from the rear coach which caused the engineman far ahead to look back, as if something had caused a car to tumble down an embankment. The newsboys had looked out the windows of their car, when they saw the word "Winona" on the bathhouse. They got out of the car in about a minute.

They took off the top coat of railroad dust after reaching the Lodge, went to The Inn for dinner, and in less than two hours after they arrived at the Park were giving a concert in the auditorium. The big hall was filled with people and the band had a splendid greeting. Every number whether it was a heavy overture or a swinging march was heartily encored, and the solos were just as well received. This morning the boys will have a plunge in the lake, and after a night's rest will show the music lovers of Winona Park what kind of talent is to be found in this juvenile organization. They are directed by J. B. Vanderwerker, who organized the band several years ago, and who has since been its trainer. Frank G. Hay, manager of circulation of the Indianapolis News, and Mrs. Vandewerker are also at the Park.

STARTED FOR THE CLOUDS.

Big Airship Would Have Sailed Away But for a Mishap.

Bodkin's airship started for the clouds above Winona Park late yesterday afternoon and gave evidence that it could sail through the air, but it met with a mishap before it was far above the ground, and the trip of Capt. Mattery, who was to be the navigator, had to be abandoned for the day. A great crowd of people were in and outside the aerodrome while the monster was being rigged for the initial Winona trip. It was a curious crowd that stood about the big bag of Japanese silk which had been filled with gas, while a half dozen men, with a netting as coarse as the mesh of a hammock, spread the great net over the back of the monster and tied bags of ballast at the ends of the cords. It was like getting a pacer ready for a free-for-all event on the turf, and, while the crowd was anxious to see the airship sailing sky-ward, the people were interested in watching the preparations.

It was after 5 o'clock when everything was ready. The big balloon was taken out of the tent that shelters it and was attached to the "saddle," which looked as if it might be a section of a suspension bridge. Something like a Dutch windmill, revolving with the speed of a circular saw in a lumber mill, was set in motion, it being attached to a powerful little motor. A rudder, about the size of a three-sheet bill-board, was at the tail. When the last knot had been tied, when all was in readiness, the word was given, and the Columbia started. But it did not go far. The whirling arms in front caught in the rigging and broke the shaft to the engine. The trip speedily came to an end when the engine's power was shut off.

The damage to the airship was not so serious but that it could be repaired and another attempt at flying into the Winona on a rusty nail a day or so ago and had difficulty in getting around.

Milford played at New Paris yesterday, but the telephone line was out of commission and no returns could be obtained. The score will be found in tomorrow's paper.

The game between Warsaw and Milford, scheduled for today, has been postponed on account of Snyder's death.

Boys and Girls in Woods.

"Goody! Goody! Goody! We're going to the woods today to have a corn-roast. Going in rowboats, too. Oh! Goody—I just love to row!" These were the sentiments of a small girl on the announcement of Mr. Smith, leader of the Boys' and Girls' Club, last Saturday morning.

"Oh! But we'll miss our bathing if we go to the woods."

"No," said Mr. Smith, with a small girl tugging at each hand and another hanging skies will be made this afternoon and every other afternoon of the week.

Baseball Notes.

Winona, as well as Warsaw, feels deeply the sad death of Frank Snyder, the Warsaw second baseman. He had been growing steadily worse and died early yesterday morning. His death was caused by lockjaw, the result of his accident, July 28. The Warsaw team came on the field yesterday wearing small pieces of crepe and they devoted their share of the proceeds of the game to flowers for his funeral.

Both shortstops yesterday had an off day as he result of accidents. Louis Scott ran into the New Paris first baseman Saturday and went into the game with a severe case of "Charley horse" on his thigh which prevented him from covering ground as he usually does and made it hard for him to get at a ground ball, while West stepped to his coat, "we'll take you in bathing at 2 o'clock."

Such wild enthusiasm as prevails in the the Boys' and Girls' Club is rarely met with elsewhere. Persons passing the Club building are attracted by the youthful hilarity and stop to take a moment's glance, feeling their hearts grow young within them as a game of indoor baseball taxes the activity of the boys to the utmost, or a sack race among the girls produces the wildest kind of excitement.

Winona Interurban League Schedule.

The following is the schedule of games to be played this week in the Winona Interurban League:

Tuesday—Warsaw at Milford.
Wednesday—Goshen at Leesburg.
Thursday—Milford at Goshen.
Friday—New Paris at Leesburg.
Saturday—Leesburg at Winona.

THE EDITORS AT WINONA

Indiana Newspaper Men Are Arriving at the Lake for a Week of Pleasure.

The editors of Indiana are pouring into Winona Park for the first allied rally of all the state associations of newspaper workers. W. K. Penrod, of the Loogootee Tribune, who originated the allied rally idea, came late Saturday to see that the affairs of the week started smoothly. On the same train came Ed Toner, of the Anderson Herald. The editors arrived in generous numbers on the early trains of Monday, and more than a hundred people came on the Winona flyer from the south. At 10 o'clock last evening another delegation arrived, and about 200 members of the editorial party will breakfast at the lake this morning. The indications point to about 500 of these visitors who will be here for a week.

There is promise that there will, during the week, be about as many Republican and Democratic politicians at the lake as there will be editors. A state campaign will open this fall and the candidates of the two great parties will come to Winona Lake to lay what plans they can toward getting into the newspapers "top of column, next to reading matter." Members of the state central committees will be at the lake, as will many of the candidates for Congress. Besides the editors and politicians, the manufacturers of type and other printing appliances will be represented by their Indiana salesmen.

The editors meet at The Inn after breakfast this morning, when they will receive tickets which will open to them many courtesies of the park. Later in the morning they will meet in the chapel of The Inn to hear three topics discussed, for there are to be some interesting morning programs for about three days. E. A. Remy, of the Seymour Republican, will today discuss "Railroad Advertising;" Frank Singleton, of the Martinsville Republican, will speak to the subject "Fraternity;" John B. Stoll, of the South Bend Times, will speak on "The True Newspaper Man's Mission."

This afternoon the editorial visitors will hear the Indianapolis News' Newsboys' Band, will watch for a flight of the airship and participate in many social diversions.

SUMMER SCHOOL REUNION.

Five Classes of School for Librarians Will Be Represented.

On Wednesday afternoon and evening will be held a reunion of the students of the Summer School for Librarians, conducted for the past five years by the Public Library Commission of Indiana. Representatives of the four former classes are expected to meet with the present class at the Mount Memorial building where, at 1:30 p. m., appropriate anniversary exercises will be held. Addresses will be made by Jacob P. Dunn and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Earl, members of the Public Library Commission; Miss Merica Hoagland, secretary of the Commission; Miss Anna R. Phelps, head instructor of the school, and others.

After a boat ride on the City of Warsaw, an informal reception will be held. Chalmers Hadley, who is delivering a course of lectures on "Reference and Bibliography," will give an illustrated talk on book plates.

PLAYING WITH CHILDREN

How They Are Instructed and Amused in the Kindergarten School at Winona Lake.

When one recalls the words of the Catholic priest who said, "Give me the first seven years of a child's life and I care not who has him after that," he is impressed with the grave responsibility of the child's early education and with the great trust that is placed in the kindergarten. It is this sentiment that has exalted primary teaching and aroused great minds to the evolution of great schemes.

Mrs. Blaker has a large class now at work on the basic principles of pedagogy, but the great triumph of her department is the model kindergarten, where the principles actually prove in the concrete. One hundred children, between the ages of two and seven, have enrolled this season and the average daily attendance has been fifty. The work here has not only fascinated little people, but has attracted hundreds of visitors, some of whom come daily to bask in the genial atmosphere.

On the day of soap bubbles the children are in ecstasy. They all vie with each other in the making of big bubbles and brightly colored ones, and in the very making of a thing so perfect in form and color lies an inspiration that sustains their interest almost indefinitely.

But at the sound of a chord from the piano the mirth subsides, and fifty pairs of eager eyes are directed toward Miss Armstrong, who perhaps announces a game of tag. They applaud this with glee and quickly form a large circle with hands extended to receive the signal for pursuit.

Following this may be the games which teach the life of birds; of nest building and feeding and learning to fly. Then there are lessons in paper folding and cutting and coloring. Interspersing these are selections upon the piano, and Miss Armstrong will ask, "What does the piano say?" In this way children learn to recognize good music.

The word "don't" is not heard in this school. Wrong lies in the motive and at this early age children are rarely concerned with motive. Their attention is diverted from selfishness and rudeness to nobler things. They are so occupied with those suggestions that are instructive that there is no time to be naughty.

Love, patient kindness, and good cheer are signal virtues of an efficient primary teacher, and they are here so rife that the quick response shines in the radiant face of every pupil. His overflowing heart must find relief in squeezing his neighbors hand and smiling upon him and caressing him, giving him "pointers."

Very gently and gradually obedience is instilled into the child. Should he refuse to march he is carried and is obeying to the extent that he is at least up and going. Should he persistently stand quiet when his teacher awaits response, she adroitly awakens his interest in some home happening and then leads up to the occasion. But after a few days attendance obedience becomes the basis of reliable conduct. In one demure lad it even assumed alarming proportions. He was on one occasion so earnestly enacting a command to clasp hands that he failed to hear when it was reversed. His neighbors strove heroically to obey the second injunction while he remained loyal to the first. That cause which was in the hands of two champions was victorious by the supreme law of might, and the defeated boy had now occasion to grasp the situation and the cloud was dispelled.

A very impressive feature of the morning is the leave taking. Miss Armstrong stands in the center of her circle and with winning graciousness she bows to each; the bow is returned, the child advances, shakes hands and departs.

Miss Armstrong is assisted in this work by Miss Lulu Schwinn, of Covington, Ind.; Miss Alma Gephart, of Indianapolis, and Miss Beth Wilson, of Logansport. Dorothy Lockwood, of Peru, and Mary Bryson, of Liberty, are interested in this department and have been gracious helpers. There is also a nurse here for the very little folk.

DEPARTMENT OF FRENCH.

Progress Made by Beginners in Class of Charlton Andrews.

In the department of Modern Languages of the Winona Summer School, located at the south end of the Mount Memorial building, Charlton Andrews conducts the work in French. The beginners' class, after less than four weeks' study, converses almost glibly in the language of la belle France. Mr. Andrews works on the theory that the summer is no time, and Winona no place for the drudgery of hard study. In consequence, his students do practically all their work during the hour and a half they spend each day in the class-room.

This plan has had its ample justification in the progress of the class which, from its first hour, has made French absolutely its sole means of communication. The instructor supplies his students with a vocabulary by means of object lessons whose concrete ideas are in question. What he cannot illustrate with articles actually at hand, and Mr. Andrews declares there are at least five hundred of these in every ordinary school-room, he draws upon the blackboard. He makes no pretensions to artistic ability, but, on the contrary, is amply satisfied that his roughly sketched outlines of animals and plants, buildings and furniture, are usually recognized at once. He says that this crude drawing serves a double purpose in that it makes the students laugh and thus relieves the tension of concentration.

But it is in the conveyance of abstract notions that the ingenuity of the instructor is put to the test. It is hardly possible to draw a picture, for instance, of the verb "to wish." Mr. Andrews teaches this verb by breaking a piece of chalk and asking the student to do the same with his own watch or glasses. The latter, in refusing, instantly apprehends the meaning of "Je ne veux pas" ("I do not wish to") as the instructor puts the words into the student's mouth.

This is merely an example to show how hundreds of abstract ideas are conveyed with the words that represent them, without resorting to translation. For Mr. Andrews' theory is that translation is almost invariably fatal if one is trying to learn actually to speak a foreign tongue.

"Every educated person," he declared, "can read and write in one or more languages besides his own; but not one in a thousand can speak other languages with any degree of fluency. This pernicious state of affairs is due to the fact that the student first learns to translate and, like the boy who learned reading, finds he can never leave off." So Mr. Andrews' students learn the French words and idioms first of all by sound, by sight later on. And it is by this plan that they are enabled to speak the language at a time when students taught by the old method are scarcely able to read.

Mr. Andrews brightens his lessons these summer mornings with as much gaiety as can be infused into the conversations he carries on with his class, and already there are many standing jokes among them which serve to relieve the necessary concentration. "After the first fifteen minutes," he explained, "the students foresee what is about to be said, and by this fact the act of learning becomes a pleasure to them. What they learn they do not forget."

EGYPT AND EGYPTIANS

Dr. Rogers Spoke of the Old Nile
Country at 11 O'clock Bible
Hour Yesterday.

Dr. Robert W. Rogers talked on "Egypt, the Land and People," at the 11 o'clock hour yesterday. He said that the pure descendants of the old Egyptians are now called the Reme. The Arabians now found in Egypt are not descendants of the ancient Egyptians.

Egypt received the name black country from the black soil. The word Tont always meant, as it now means, a two-fold country. There has always been the upper and lower Egypt. The lower Egyptian speaks with scorn of the inhabitant of upper Egypt, and vice versa. The ancient Egyptians made a very careful distinction between north and south land. In all the inscriptions on the ancient tablets one reads of the kings of both upper and lower Egypt. The word Egypt was originally the name of one city.

Dr. Rogers dwelt upon the fact that Egypt is an extremely small country. It is but 586 miles by river from Cairo to the extreme southern limit of the country. As a crow flies, the distance is but 550 miles. Egypt is the narrowest country in the world. At some places it is but two and one-half miles wide. One can see across the entire country, except in the delta. The average width of Egypt is 12 miles with only 11,342 square miles of total area. Egypt is 21 square miles smaller than Belgium and has 43 divisions.

Dr. Rogers made some laughable comments on the climate of Egypt. The highest summer heat in upper Egypt is 122, while in winter the lowest point reached by the thermometer is 37. Dr. Rogers said that twice he had seen it cold enough in upper Egypt to freeze ice, the very thinnest ice that was gone in an hour, and yet it was ice.

The summer season in Egypt is very dangerous because of the dry heat. One does not realize how warm it is, and day after day of the extreme heat frequently causes a break down.

The clarnsin, of Egyptian south winds, bring such great clouds of dust that even the sun is blotted out. There is no such thing as a cloud in Egypt.

For six months of the year the cool north wind blows from the Mediterranean and Dr. Rogers says that this north wind is a tonic to the soul of man. When the Egyptian dies he prays that after death he may enjoy the cool north wind.

Dr. Rogers made the statement that it never rained in Egypt. He afterward corrected the statement and said that once while he was in Egypt it had rained for one minute; another time it had rained for four seconds.

There would be no Egypt were it not for the Nile river. In June the river bed is so low that a small flat-bottomed boat that carries the mail can hardly keep in the channel. From the fifteenth to the eighteenth of July the increase is very rapid. Along in September it ceases to rise and in October attains its highest level. At this time the water has lifted itself 41 feet and two inches above its normal height.

After leaving equatorial Africa, the Nile has no tributary for 1,500 miles. This is one reason why Africa is so free from disease. No creek or sewerage empties into the Nile, throughout the length of Egypt and 1,000 miles beyond.

Dr. Rogers made one fairly taste the pure soft water of the Nile as he dwelt upon its virtues as a beverage.

The irrigation of Egypt was graphically described and he told how the present system made good the words of the Bible where it says "He waters the land with his foot."

Dr. Rogers showed how the Nile river had advanced the civilization of Egypt by teaching the necessity of land surveying and river engineering.

The Egyptians studied the starry heavens to know when to expect the yearly overflow of the river. Because of the overflow there was need of constant surveying. All landmarks were swept away each year. There were no fences, only boundary stones. Because of this the Egyptians worked out an elaborate system of records. This yearly overflow was the basis of the wonderful decisions which have come down from the Egyptians.

This river carried all the material from which was made the wonderful palaces and pyramids of Egypt. In fact, said Dr. Rogers, Egypt is the Nile and the Nile is Egypt. Today Dr. Rogers will speak on the people of Egypt.

LECTURE ON SAVONAROLA.

Dr. Dawson, the English Preacher,
Spoke at Auditorium.

Dr. William Dawson, of London, the English preacher and writer, gave his lecture, "Savonarola," last evening at the auditorium. Dr. Dawson said in part: "The one man who stands out most prominently in the history of Florence is the monk Savonarola. The fall of Constantinople was the beginning of the golden age of the Renaissance. Utter loss of morals and faith were attributes of this golden age. Into this age came Savonarola. He had high ideals. To him right was right. He refused to join hands with the spirit of the Renaissance. He studied his Bible and grew farther away from the vanities of this world. The result of his thought was that Savonarola took the gard of the monk."

Dr. Dawson drew from this chapter in Savonarola's life the lesson taught by Shakespeare—"to thine own self be true."

Lorenzo, poet, prince, scholar and ruler, was the leader in the vice of his age. He was surrounded by courtiers who preferred, or at least pretended to, his poetry to the music of the divine Dante.

Standing opposed to Lorenzo in all his magnificence was the prior of St. Marks. No one knows the beginning of the enmity between Lorenzo and Savonarola. The first desired homage and the second refused to give homage but to the Almighty God. Many times did Lorenzo send warnings and messages to the grave prior, but the only answer was "Tell Lorenzo he must depart and I will remain."

At last Lorenzo was at death's door and sent for Savonarola. The prior came.

That night Lorenzo died and one of Michael Angelo's angels still guards the tomb of he whom Savonarola refused absolution.

The last chapter of Savonarola's life is now opened. He is the central figure of all Florence. All eyes are turned toward him. He predicted the wrath that was to come and his predictions began to be fulfilled. Princes fell and Florence trembled with his eloquence. Then he was turned against with a bitterness never before equalled. He stood alone.

Too late Florence saw her mistake. With Savonarola's death Florence sinks into a stupor from which she was destined to be awakened by a Matsquina and a Cavour.

Warsaw and Winona played a loose game yesterday in which the former came out second best, thanks to "Crummie" Thomas' gilt-edged work in the box. Each team put in new men and team work was noticeably lacking but we won, so we did, and some few bobbles and a fan out or two are hard to remember with the score six to three and the six on our side of the board. Elliott got the "glad hand" in great style when he reached up about ten feet and pulled down a wild throw from short and got back in time to catch Enyert. Diddel also came in for his share in the fifth for his three-sacker to left, and he kept up his record by two more clean hits the next two times at bat.

Warsaw started the ball to rolling in the third. Johnson went out, pitcher to first. Trish hit a hard one over the bag and was safe. Powers sent one to Thomas who threw wild to second and Trish tried to get to third, but White caught him by a pretty throw to Drucky. Hunter was hit, went on to second and both men scored on West's single. They made another in the seventh on Hunter's double and West's single after chances to retire the side had not been accepted. The home team scored one in the fourth, two in the fifth and cinched the game in the sixth with three more.

Girls of New York.

Mrs. C. S. Besserer, in her address before the audience that filled the parlors of the Winona Hotel yesterday, spoke of "The East Side Girl of New York." The home life was described showing the small unventilated rooms, in the tenement houses. The smaller boarding houses and the smaller hotels were spoken of.

The employment was discussed by Mrs. Besserer, who has visited factories where the thousands of girls work from dawn until dark, where the employers consider these girls "little more than beasts." Miss Chapman sang two solos.

COOKS BY ELECTRICITY

Mrs. Sanborn Will Lecture This Week
Under Auspices of Winona Woman's Club.

The ladies who are at Winona will have an opportunity this week to attend a course of illustrated lectures on cooking by electricity. These lectures will be given by Mrs. F. Violet Sanborn, under the auspices of the Winona Woman's Club.

Mrs. Sanborn will illustrate by using electricity for all kinds of fancy and substantial cooking and for laundry work. She claims and will show by practical illustration that electricity can be used in the kitchen without waste, or dust, and that the work can be done in one-half the time required by any other cooking agent. Housekeepers will get new ideas on all forms of cooking, aside from the electrical feature of the lectures and each day Mrs. Sanborn will tell her audience the cost of the cooking the day before.

The first city in the West to put in electric kitchens was Kokomo. Three central stations in Indiana recently engaged the services of Mrs. F. Violet Sanborn to give a course of lectures in the principal towns of Indiana. Seven lectures were given in each town, six in the day and a chafing dish lecture in the evening. At each lecture an attractive menu of electrically-cooked dishes were prepared. At Muncie, a city of about 25,000 population, the attendance during the course of seven lectures was over 2,000 persons. This was in spite of the fact that these lectures were given in the Commercial club hall which is on the third floor of a building not provided with elevator service. At Marion the lectures were held in the Carnegie Library, which was filled to overflowing.

Mrs. Sanborn is convinced that the electrical kitchen will supersede all other means in the preparation of food in the near future. Certainly it is much the cleaner and more modern method. The gasoline stove should have long ago been relegated to the shades of the past generation. Too many lives have already been sacrificed on the altar of the gasoline stove.

The lectures will be given in the chapel of The Inn daily from 10 a. m. to 11:30.

PUBLIC LIBRARY COMMISSION.

State Organization Holds Its Quarterly Meeting Today.

The Public Library Commission of Indiana will hold its regular quarterly meeting at Winona Lake today at 1:30 p. m. The members of the Commission are appointed by the Governor to advance the library interests of the state by giving information and advice concerning the organization and reorganization of public libraries and plans for library buildings; to furnish book lists and aid in the selection of books to furnish books in traveling libraries to bookless communities without public library facilities are other duties assigned the Commission.

The law under which the commission is acting also places upon it the duty of providing instruction in modern library science. This the Commission does through summer school courses and individual field instruction.

Jacob P. Dunn is president of the Commission; Mrs. Elizabeth Earl and W. W. Parsons are the other members. Miss Merica Hoagland, secretary and state organizer, has served as executive officer of the Commission for the past five years.

Biological Station News.

Great preparations have been made by the students for the annual trip to Turkey lake. Professors Lane and Dellinger, accompanied by about forty students, left the entrance building at 8 o'clock this morning for Leesburg, where they will leave the car and wander through the tamarack swamps the remainder of the week. Dr. Pohlman, with his classes in Human Embryology and Histology, will continue their work at the station.

Dr. Eigenmann is in Bloomington today, but will join the students on their march about Wednesday.

THE INDUSTRIAL OCTOPUS.

Prof. Crooks, of Amherst College,
Spoke on Trust Evils.

Prof. J. W. Crooks, who has the chair of Sociology at Amherst College, gave the convocation address of yesterday afternoon. Prof. Crooks is a ready and forceful speaker, and has been a close student of social science for years. The lecture of yesterday is the first of a series that he will make at Winona.

"The Industrial Octopus; Are Trusts a Benefit to Society," was the subject of yesterday's lecture.

Prof. Crooks said in part: "A great many people think a trust is an Industrial Octopus. We can't get away from the trust, no matter how hard we try. Institutions may be evil things unless they are properly looked after. The trust is in itself an invention."

Prof. Crooks illustrated this statement by telling the life history of Mr. Burbank, who has been successful as a raiser of fruits and vegetables.

He made three divisions of the development of trade. The first was the domestic system, where everything was done in the home. One of the evils of this system was that the women had no time to cultivate the graces the women now enjoy. A second division is the competition system. This is an advantage over the domestic system in many ways. One is that the family has the home to live in, where before it was an industrial center.

"But," said Prof. Crooks, "there are many evils in this competition system. One is the great expense of advertising where the spirit of competition is intense. The people who buy the goods pay for all the advertising."

"The evil of monopoly is the evil of high prices. The conditions under which a monopoly sells its goods is the price that will bring the greatest returns. The reason the people are afraid of a trust is because they are afraid the price of necessities will be arbitrarily changed. A second evil is that the investor has not a fair chance. A still greater evil is the hold the monopolies have on state legislators."

Prof. Crooks suggested remedies for high-priced monopolies. One is potential competition. Not competition from small competitors, but competition on a large scale.

The speaker emphasized the necessity of railroad legislation in connection with trusts. The rebate system is the greatest promoter of the trust. There should be more publicity in the management of corporations and trusts. Since their power is given them by civil authority they should report to the people.

Winona Real Estate

Winona real estate shows an annual appreciation in value averaging ten per cent. With the trolley development now going on and the growth of Winona Lake as an all-year-round community this increase will be greatly accelerated. As a site for a home, summer and winter, Winona Lake offers unequalled advantages for those in sympathy with its environment. The Real Estate Department office in Administration Building will be pleased to show you about and explain further the advantages of such an investment.

The Sistine Madonna.

The Sistine Madonna exhibit in the second room west of the Administration building is just the size of Raphael's original and was embroidered on canvas by Clara Ripberger. The exhibit is now in charge of Miss Ripberger, a sister of the artist.

It took seven years to complete the work, and the delicate colorings were made by the artist using three threads twisted into the required shading. A remarkable thing about the picture is, it was made from memory. The artist would visit the room where the great picture hung, charge her memory with the colors, shadings and impressions and then go home and embroider the part she had in mind.

The picture was exhibited by the German government and was awarded a gold medal at Paris in 1900 and the grand prize at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904.

The Winona Woman's Club will hold its next meeting Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Winona Hotel. "The Relation of the Home to Children's Reading and Amusement" will be the topic considered.

Smith & Nixon Piano.

The name of the Smith & Nixon piano, used in the Thomas concerts last week, has become a household word at Winona park. It is not surprising that Smith & Nixon up-rights are finding a place in the homes of Winonians in the park and elsewhere. The really great artists appearing here during the past few seasons were nearly all Smith & Nixon enthusiasts. Last week the Smith & Nixon name was associated with a long list of celebrities appearing with the Theodore Thomas orchestra, including the two pianists—Van den Berg and Wells. At least 40,000 people attended these concerts and have taken the Smith & Nixon name home with them, and those who heard these celebrated soloists are convinced that these instruments are the triumph of piano-forte production. The entire week has brought a great orchestra, a great conductor, a great array of soloists and a great instrument before Winonians. All these elements making a week of continual delight not only to musicians, but to everybody whose good fortune it was to be here. It was Winona's greatest week.
